THE GIFT TRACKER

W E L C O M E

On the topic of gifts around your wedding, it doesn't just mean for the lovely ones that you receive from guests but also those that you give to the people who have played a part in the creation of your big day.

In this Gift Tracker, I'll be providing you with ideas and inspiration, also touching on the different current trends around gift giving.

We can get super creative with the language that we use around this sometimes awkward topic and I'll also be sharing some important information on redeeming certain gifts also.

Lets get started, shall we?

Nikki xoxo

THE ULTIMATE GIFT TRACKER

Tribal Love!

It takes a lot of time, effort and support to pull off an event like a wedding and so, to do this successfully you need a great team of people around you. A collective network of family and friends can make your wedding planning process so much smoother and easier.

A nice way to say thank you is to present them with a gift, possibly the night before or on the morning of the wedding to show your appreciation. I feel inspired to share with you some of the beautiful ways that you can show your gratitude to family, friends and wedding party members from a search on Pinterest. I have also included a few ideas below if you're still feeling stuck. Don't be afraid to get stuck in either as some of these can be handmade, making them cost effective, personable and from the heart.

Proposal Boxes

You said YES and now its your turn to do the proposing!

Who have you chosen to stand next to you on your big day? Who made your VIP list?

It comes the proposal box trend that's currently at an all-time high! They are super cute and fun little boxes of gifts for your bride tribe and below are a few ideas to replicate if you wish to. If you want to do something special but can't justify the extra expense then you could always create a simple but elegant little card asking the exact same question!

Get creative and use tools like Canva, Minted, Pinterest, Instagram, Etsy and Creative Market to fulfil your proposal needs!

Pick it, Pack it, Propose it!

If you are deciding to present some beautiful little boxes as a way to propose to your tribe then lets get that tightly locked in now. Use the template below to note down the items you wish to place in the box and where you're sourcing these items from so as to keep all of the information together. You can then use the tracker below to keep up to date with the packing and presenting of the boxes.

Gift Inspo!

Your friends and family will naturally want to give you a gift to mark the occasion of your wedding and although this can feel like an awkward topic, your guests will want some sort of indication as to what you would like to receive.

There are now plenty of new businesses on and offline that specialise in this specific part of the wedding and I'll name a few of those sites and companies below for you.

A common gift would be vouchers or money so that you can use them as you please, so really take a moment to consider what would actually be helpful for you to receive, maybe you're looking to move house or to renovate your home, book a honeymoon destination that would normally cost more than you're willing to spend on a holiday? Whatever you decide you would like to do, tell your guests so that they can contribute in some way.

Sit down with your partner now and have a go at brainstorming some ideas that you would both love to ask of your guests for when the time comes.

Gift Registries!

There are some incredible wedding gift list companies available now and below you'll find just a few options for some of the best UK award-winning wedding registries to take a look at and before you know it, you'll have built the dreamiest wedding gift list of all time!

Your Wish List!

If you've decided that you would prefer to receive physical products then feel free to use the template below to note down your dream wish list. Imagine you're writing your Christmas wish list to Santa! I do recommend though that you use a free tool from one of the companies I listed on the previous page because it will avoid duplicate gifts as each item gets digitally checked off from the initial list by each guest that purchases it.

This template is more for personal use and its for those (like me!) who LOVE to make handwritten lists before inputting something digitally.

Poems

Gift giving is not really an easy topic to talk about with your guests because ultimately, you probably don't mind if you received one or not? Maybe I'm wrong?!

Here are a few great poems that I found online at hitched.co.uk and of course you can always use them for your own wedding. It's a good idea to mention what you would prefer your guests to do in regards to gift giving because its likely that they would ask you anyway and so this will eliminate any awkward conversations if you're the type of person to likely feel out of place on this topic.

If you've created a wedding website then you should also mention it on there too and of course, if you're using an online gift registry then you can link your guests straight up to your wish list for ease of purchase.

We're tying the knot and we just can't wait,
We knew it would happen on our very first date.
As we've got our home dressed up with accessories,
We don't really think that a wedding gift list is necessary.
But if you did want to give something to help us on our way,
Some money in a card would truly make our day!

As we're getting married we thought it would be fun,
To move into a brand new home – we need to get it done.
As wedding gifts are bulky and we're a little short on space,
Some money would be the ideal gift to help us buy our place!

All the wedding planning has worn us out,
And a dream honeymoon would make us happy, no doubt!
But we've got a little problem and we're wondering if you can help,
We've started up a honeymoon fund – any contribution would make us yelp!
